THE OUTCAST.

Go, stone her to death, said a maiden proud,
As an outcast fled from a gaping crowd;
And she turned her steps to the church, and there,
Bowed low as the minister knelt in prayer,
And he prayed that the Lord of Hosts
Would come down and the orphan's home;
To the widow's heart and the orphan's home;
And for all the powers that be, he prayed
And a stress on the sins of man he laid.
But where shall the outcast hide her shame?
Must she turn to the sink of vice again?
Go, stone her to death," said the matron's cry,
As she passed the suffering outcast by;
And she hastened home where her daughters fair,
Moved round the room with a queenly air,
And told how with shame she blushed
As she passed the form of the frail outcast.
"Go, stone her to death," said the man of God;
"She's not fit to number the earth's green sod."
And he groaned for the sins of Adam's race,
And forgot his own in his prayer for grace;
"Go, stone her to death," is the popular cry,
As the rich and the haughty pass her by;
She has drunk of the gall and vinegar now,
Let the crown of thorns be placed on her brow.
What's the virtue worth that turns to scorn
From the heart that's with sin and sorrow torn?
What's the priestly robe if its folds enclose
A heart that scoffs at the outcast's woe?
Does the maiden proud, with the heart so cold,
Remember the Magdalene of old?
Has she weighed what the lowly Jesus said,
As the doomed of old was before him laid?
And the haughty dame that blushed as she passed
The outcast frail, could she have cast
The stone at her suffering sister there,
And at night bowed her head in sinless prayer?
Could the casting priest with his holy tone,
Cast with sinless heart or hands the stone?
Oh, when will the spirit of Christ, as of yore,
Raise the fallen up—bid them sin no more?

THE CAPITOL RELIEF BILL.

Mr. Editor: The editor of the Enterprise seems to have changed base since the purchase of the State Prison in 1864. At that time he was satisfied to pay $80,000 for a building—standing on land to which the owner of the building had no title, and which had not cost one-eighth the price the committee bargained to pay, of which committee was Mr. Daggett, now editor of the Enterprise. Recently, when a claim for $2,500 was presented by an attorney for services rendered the State, in the defalcation case, which, by many was considered exorbitant, the editor saw no cause of complaint; but when poor laborers and mechanics, who have toiled a whole month for less than half the consideration demanded for one day's services by the attorney, come and ask the State to pay them the little pittance which they have earned by laboring on the State Capitol building, this philanthropic editor tells them to look to Mr. Cavanaugh or his bondsmen for remuneration. It does not matter whether the building has cost twice the amount covered by the contract, or whether that extra cost has accrued from change of plans or from short estimates; enough to know that Mr. Cavanaugh agreed to construct the building for a certain price, and if he has no means of his own to fall back upon, let the poor men who furnished material and have done the work, suffer the consequences; the State wants its pound of flesh. Of the many competent judges who I have heard express opinion on the subject, not one has put the cost of the Capitol building at less than $150,000, and call it cheap at that price. If the State has a valuable consideration for the money expended and relief asked for, why should those who have assisted by labor and material, be compelled to suffer loss from the inability of the contractor to pay. Had it been shown that the money had been squandered and the State were to receive no benefit for the proposed appropriation, there would be true cause of complaint. Such is not the fact. The building has been constructed by good mechanics, with a fair degree of skill and economy, and will bear the test of investigation by competent builders.

A correspondent of the Enterprise, Mr. Hoole, of Reno, comes to the aid of the editor and says: "He was a bidder for the Capitol at $94,440, and could have cleared $10,000 on the job." Now, I undertake to say that there was not in the State of Nevada, at the time of the letting, a mechanic or builder capable of making a close calculation on the cost of the building by reference to the plans and specifications. It comprised that variety of work and material which none but an experienced and practical builder of that class of buildings could safely estimate. Mr. Hoole would have found his bid far too low for the work, and his $10,000 profit would have been a long way over the left. I happen to know, however, that Mr. Hoole had an anchor to the windward in the way of expected alterations and extras, as he told me himself no public building was ever completed according to the original plans, and once the contract was varied he would be all right. That he could have built the Capitol as cheap as any other party, I have no doubt. That he could have completed the building in the manner it now is for anything like the money he claims we would have done it for, is mere bluff. Mr. Hoole's fling at "amateur contractors" will apply as well in Reno as Carson, although I was not before aware that the Constitution required any general law on the subject.

Carson is not responsible for the acts of Treasurer Rhodes, or for the want of tact and judgment on the part of the Territorial Committee who purchased a building at eight times its real value without title to the ground on which it stood.

The bondsmen of Mr. Cavanaugh are not responsible for the work and material used in constructing the Capitol; they are responsible to the State for its completion, and as there is but a comparative small amount of work required for that purpose, the Enterprise and Mr. Hoole need not be uneasy on that score. The Capitol will be completed. The relief now asked for is not for the use of the contractor, but to pay laboring men, many of whose all is contained in the amount due them for labor on the Capitol building. For one I cannot believe that a body of honorable men, who have access to all the facts connected with this case, will so far forget the rights of workingmen as to allow the State to possess itself of valuable property without rendering an equivalent therefor. Nor should the biased opinion of an editor be allowed any more influence in deciding this question than the most humble tax payer in the State.

The editor of the Enterprise says that he is told "that much of Mr. Cavanaugh's indebtedness is imaginary, and that he does not honestly owe one-quarter of the amount which he asks the State to assume." That nearly all the statements made by said editor are imaginary, I think he would himself acknowledge, were he to examine the facts. Mr. Cavanaugh asks nothing for himself. Vouchers are in the hands of the Commissioners showing what every dollar of the indebtedness is for, and who will be the recipients of this relief bill if passed. B. H. M.

LIVELY BIDDING.—The Oregon Herald, referring to the sale of lots in the new town of Kalama, W. T., says, over two hundred and fifty lots were sold at prices ranging from $500 to $1,000. Many who purchased lots were able to sell them again the same day for an advance. One man who bid in an $800 lot, it is said, sold it again for $1,800. Bidders were under the impression that payments were to be made in gold coin, and governed themselves accordingly, but were much surprised, and, of course, gratified when Gen. Sprague announced, at the close of the sale, that currency would be received at par.

A good joke is told in Washington at the expense of a well-known Senator, who is notorious for taking two cocktails in succession before breakfast. One morning while the Senator was practicing at the Metropolitan bar, a friend put to him the pertinent question: "Senator, why do you take two cocktails as a custom?" Won't one tone you?" The Senator drew himself up: "I will tell you why I take two cocktails. When I have taken one it makes me feel like another man. Well, you see I'm bound by common courtesy to treat that man; so I take a second."

"I shall die happy," said the expiring husband to the wife, who was weeping most dutifully by the bedside, "if you will promise not to marry that object of my jealousy your cousin John." "Make yourself quite easy about that, I am engaged to his brother; now die happy dear, please," said the expectant widow.

A western lecturer recently truthfully remarked: "If a newspaper man is faithful to his trust, honest, fearless and independent he will make enemies—and great ones."
